

What IS a soul

And questions that come from it

If soul is our core if it houses all our memories even outside our brain and is so light it can reach heaven or phase into hell

Actually if you did phase into the core of the earth wouldn't it be torture on its own? Earth is pretty huge and falling for that long would probably teach you how painful it would be

what else could it do

Would it be fragile? Tare apart as easily as paper?

Would that be the reason for being isolated outside of the over world?

Would pain be stronger or weaker

If so many stories say the power of a soul is strong then would a soul using its power erase a part of themselves? Would that hurt?

If feelings are made by chemicals in the brain and the soul ONLY keeps the electric pulses therefore physical memories of the brain then would it just be braindead? Unable to feel anything?

Then what would torture even do to them

Actually souls would need to be made of multiple soul elements to actually feel human including the nervous system

Meaning there is a soul periodic table of what they're made of

Unless they're a slab of one thing in which case it's pretty stupid considering how many things it would need to do for a human being to feel pain non the less remember everything and think

Wait could souls even cry? In which case is there soul water? In order to cry you need to drink water right? Then that would mean either souls can interact with normal water or that there's a soul version of water that only souls can interact with

In which case what's the point of going to the core of the freaking planet if normal lava won't do anything they'll need soul lava

In which case soul lava would just be molten rock that a soul can touch so there are also soul rocks that souls can walk on

Where would all that soul stuff even come from the normal over world? Then that would mean the soul would never be able to phase into the planet because the rock they'd be standing would already have a soul rock in it

how is there so much space on earth between hell and over world where the soul can phase through until landing in hell

I feel like I'm a stupid philosopher from 1600 asking the questions people asked a millennia ago

If anyone answers these questions they'll most likely make them up considering I've never heard nor seen any of those answers ever be answered in any story ever

Sorry there's nothing else left I copy pasted and then deleted them

I know the cut feature exists but I'm being double safe here
